God has made everything beautiful for its own time. He has planted eternity in the human heart, but even so, people cannot see the whole scope of God's work from beginning to end.

Tectonic Forces and Sparking Water

A high carbon dioxide level near the surface causes sparkling water to form in certain areas.

When two plates of crust meet, they can push together, pull apart, or slide past each other. This can create faults and other geological features. In some areas, these features can allow for the formation of sparkling water. This is because the high pressure and temperature conditions can cause carbon dioxide to dissolve in water, creating a sparkling effect.
